

Naloxone Safety Training

There's an opioid crisis happening across the construction industry.

To help combat the opioid crisis and provide life-saving fentanyl overdose reversal training for job sites, NECA has partnered with the Alliance for Naloxone Safety in the Workplace \(ANSW\).

Led by experts, the Alliance for Naloxone Safety in the Workplace (ANSW) equips employers with the necessary information, policies, and training to effectively introduce a Naloxone program in their businesses.

What is Naloxone?

Naloxone is a critical medication capable of reversing overdoses from opioids such as heroin, fentanyl, and prescription opioid drugs. Available as injectables and nasal sprays, it is crucial in fighting the opioid crisis and can be administered without medical training.

How to institute a Naloxone policy in your workplace.

Organizations seeking to implement a Naloxone policy can start with ANSW's free, customizable template. Designed to prevent opioid-related fatalities and manage Naloxone use, it aims to reduce overdose injuries and deaths.

Available in editable Word and fillable PDF formats, you can view or download the policy or visit answ.org/workplace-policy.

Resources and training you can use immediately.

The ANSW has developed a suite of training materials, courses, and additional resources that your organization can utilize immediately.

For instant access to these resources, visit the ANSW website at answ.org/training.

SCAN ME

